Men's Hose.

Turn the Hose on Yourself—or, in other words, treat yourself to some of our Summer Hosiery. There's only one thing wrong with the men's fancy sock business—too many men get married. When they're single they buy $1.00 socks; when they're married their wives buy them 25c socks, or less. Still we have elegant lines of Fancy Hosiery for this season. All men are not married and all wives don't want their husbands to wear cheap socks, so we have them at 10c, 15c, 25c or 50c. New styles—and—well, they're handsome.

LAST WORDS OF LEO XIII.

"I Bless," Said the Pope as He Sank to Death.

Dr. Lippold, so long the pope's physician, talked with the Rome correspondent of the New York World the other night on the last moments of Leo.

He said that just before he died the pope blessed the Italian people, saying: "I have always loved my country," while the tears streamed down his face.

The doctor said that in all of his professional career he had never met with a deathbed scene comparable with that of the pope's. Leo's stoical resistance against the agony of his last moments was most edifying and impressive.

When he had given to Cardinal Oreglia his last instructions concerning the conclave he became unconscious. His last words were:

"I bless!"

He was unable to finish the sentence. When the pope died his hand unconsciously grasped at Pio Centra, his body servant, thus strangely confirming in death the theory of the union between power and labor as expressed in numerous of his encyclicals.

The examination will be based upon the entrance examination at Oxford and will consist of tests in arithmetic, either algebra or geometry, Greek and Latin grammar, Latin prose composition and Latin and Greek authors.
